

An official website of the United States government

Here's how you know

NSA/CSS

HOME > PODCAST > VIEW

Skip to main content \(Press Enter\).

PODCAST | Sept. 19, 2024

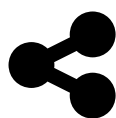

The Women of NSA: Codemakers and Codebreakers

They cracked the Enigma machine and defeated Nazi Germany. They helped us stay a step ahead of the Soviet Union's spies. They led cybersecurity modernizations to keep us safe. And today, they're leading NSA efforts to defend the nation. These are the women of NSA. Learn from a historian and a mathematician about the storied history of women's contributions to the NSA mission and national security. From World War II through the Cold War to the present day, women have been critical contributors to NSA's foreign signals intelligence and cybersecurity missions.

Skip to main content \(Press Enter\).

Check out the episode wherever you get your podcasts:

SHARE

PRINT

Related Documents

Transcript, "Women of NSA: Codemakers and Codebreakers." Episode 4 of No Such Podcast from the National Security Agency

Related Links

No Such Podcast Episode 4: The Women of NSA: Codemakers and Codebreakers

◆ No Such Podcast ◆ cryptology ◆ women in cryptology

◆ Codemaking ◆ Codebreaking

Skip to main content (Press Enter).
