In a secret program more incredible than the wildest James Bond movie, the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) has been using mediums to try to contact dead agents from both sides of the Iron Curtain, says a former top CIA administrator.

And in other mind-boggling experiments, he says, the agency has also used psychics to try to probe the minds of Russian leaders.

The success or failure of efforts to contact Penkovsky is still a closely guarded secret. But it is believed that the experiment expanded into a full-scale program.

"They began to contact our own dead agents, as well as dead agents from the other side," said Marchetti.

Marchetti said that at one point word flashed through the agency that contact had been made with the famous Major Popov, a Russian agent who disappeared in the 1950s.
