Las Vegas Sands Owner: “Most Vilified Man In Nevada.” The Las Vegas Review Journal wrote, “Sheldon Adelson is perhaps the most vilified man in Nevada.” [Las Vegas Review Journal, 1/4/00]

Sheldon G. Adelson Has Engaged In Corrupt Business Practices, Allegedly Scammed Employees Out Of Health Benefits. Sheldon G Adelson, owner of the Las Vegas Sands empire, has been involved in repeated conflicts with governmental and regulatory agencies. The Nevada Gaming Commission imposed a $1 million fine on Venetian casino, which he owns, for rigging contests and violating other Nevada gaming regulations. He is in ongoing litigation with the United States Equal Employment opportunity Commission over issues dating back to 1999. He has been repeatedly characterized as difficult to work with and “terrorizing those who get in his way.” Among other claims the billionaire has been accused of allegedly offering cash incentives for employees who opt out of health and welfare benefits. [Glasgow Evening Times, 11/3/04]

Adelson Role In Giuliani’s Campaign Could Trouble Conservatives. According to the leaked dossier, which included the invitation list to a Nov. 15 luncheon at the posh '21' restaurant in Manhattan, Giuliani cast “a much wider net than previously disclosed, and sometimes into waters that conservative voters may find troublesome. Among the invitees, for instance, was Sheldon Adelson.” [Daily News (New York), 1/3/07]

" Interface Group Holdings, a Sheldon Adelson-owned venture that controls the Sands Expo, though details of that case were unavailable late Tuesday." Las Vegas (Nev.) Review-Journal March 31, 2004,

"Interface Group-Nevada Inc. was a wholly-owned subsidiary of a holding company that owned and operated the Sands Expo and Convention Center in Las Vegas. Interface was also affiliated with a casino and hotel that were physically linked to the Sands." [ Commercial Lending Litigation News, 8/2/07]

"Owning the COMDEX show without having a hotel and casino to complement it made for an incomplete business model. In April 1989, Adelson, through his Interface Group, bought the Sands from Kirk

Kerkorian for $110 million. Only one year earlier, Kerkorian had purchased the Sands and Desert Inn from Howard Hughes's Summa Corporation for $161 million. While Adelson may have gotten more ghosts than gamblers for his money, the legendary Sands stood in a prime location. ... Adelson wasn't satisfied with just being a high-flying businessman. He yearned to spread his conservative, antiunion philosophy. He spent $2 million to support local candidates, and his battle against the Culinary union made him such a polarizing figure that his support for anyone was like the kiss of a black-widow spider. He was hated by a large segment of the voters. Las Vegas Review-Journal (Nevada) August 28, 2005
